Debut Single for Jayne Nelsen

California native Jayne Nelsen has been carving out a career for herself in Nashville for the last 5 years. This hard work has culminated in her Mark Oliverius produced debut CD, No Regrets. The lead off single, What It Really Is, penned by Michael Higgins, is very impressive indeed. The sweeping country melody nicely fits her warm, made for country music voice. Nelsen really interprets the lyric and at no point comes close to oversinging, an all too frequent problem with female vocalists.

The song reminds us that how you experience things is relative to your point of view, that what you bring to something determines what you will get out of it, with lines like 'so much of what this life can be/all depends on what you see'. The song is real, heartfelt, emotional and gently reveals its important message.

"When I first heard Michael do it, I cried," said Nelsen. "I love the song, and I love the message. So many people can relate to it. It's a different take, not one you hear every day. It makes you think, and I like songs that make you think."
